"TOLLER, CANST THOU DREAM?"
Toller, canst thou dream
At the seam, at the plow,
Higher heritage than Kings
Hast thou.

Canst thou read, in star or weed,
Answer to thy heart's deep cry?
Gold nor gem nor Love's own crown
So satisfy.

Toller, canst thou wait,
Through the storm-black hour, elate,
Ruler of thy peasant will,
Dominant of Fate?

Toller, canst thou trust?
From the dust, stand and tell,
Though the tears come streaming, all—
All is well!

THE MANCHESTER FAIR.

Maysville Elks Didn't Intend Slightest "Discourtesy," Bro. Perry.

The Elks Fair at Maysville will be held, if the program is carried out according to announcement, September 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th, the dates of the Adams, Brown and Lewis County Fair at Manchester. As these dates are the standing dates of the latter Fair, it looks like rank discourtesy for the management of the Maysville show to try to usurp them.—Manchester Signal.

In arranging the dates for the Elks Fair in this city, it was designed to "get away" from the dates of the German-town and Ripley Fairs, both of which are nearer than Manchester, and the Ewing Fair, which is but little farther away, and also to miss the dates of other Elks Fairs in nearby Kentucky cities.

The Committee found that Fairs were thicker than fleas in a country stable, and if the "Maysville show" was forced to give way to all of them, then there would be no date at all left to it, so it concluded that as probably our good friends at Manchester didn't have a patent on the four days named in September, those dates would be fixed for two of the biggest Fairs in the Ohio Valley—Manchester and Maysville.

THE LEDGER assures Bro. Perry that not the slightest "discourtesy," rank or otherwise, was intended; and if he will "take a day off" and come down during the festivities we'll send him home feeling good all over, as all Maysville people who go to Manchester are sure to feel when they come away.
